Kellie Rittershausen Named Executive Director of the National Lieutenant Governors Association (NLGA)

COVINGTON, KENTUCKY (August 7, 2024) – Kellie Rittershausen has been named Executive Director of the National Lieutenant Governors Association (NLGA) by the NLGA Executive Committee, after serving as Interim Director since June. Kellie will oversee the association's operations, programming, services, and staff.

"As the association for the seconds-in-command in state and territorial government, NLGA is fortunate to have Kellie Rittershausen ready to lead as NLGA's #2 for the past seven years," said Iowa Lt. Governor Adam Gregg, 2023-2024 NLGA Chair.

Kellie previously served as the Deputy Director of NLGA since 2017, leading private sector fundraising and sales, Member communications and marketing, meetings planning, and NLGA programs including the national STEM Scholarship Program. Prior to joining NLGA, Kellie served as Chief of Staff in Hamilton County, Ohio, for several years, leading bipartisan coalitions on local government issues requiring effective and efficient collaborations.

"NLGA is on a bright course for the future, providing lieutenant governors the opportunity to transcend partisanship and tackle the shared challenges we face across state and party lines," said Michigan Lt. Governor Garlin Gilchrist, 2024-2025 NLGA Chair. "I look forward to working with Kellie and my peer lieutenant governors to continue NLGA's successes."

The NLGA Executive Committee approved Kellie Rittershausen as Executive Director at the 2024 NLGA Annual Meeting, effective immediately.
