WHEREAS, in 2030, all members of the baby boomer generation will be older than 65 years old,¹ and

WHEREAS, by 2034, the U.S. Census Bureau projects that older adults will outnumber children for the first time in U.S. history,¹ and

WHEREAS, beyond 2030, the U.S. population is projected to grow slowly, to age considerably, and to become more racially and ethnically diverse, according to the U.S. Census Bureau,¹ and

WHEREAS, “In the history of the human species, there’s never been a time like [this],” said Dr. Richard Hodes, director of the National Institute on Aging, referring to the changing balance between young people and old,² and

WHEREAS, the aging population in the United States means that society has the responsibility and opportunity to adapt and reimagine communities with largest numbers of older people,³ and 22 WHEREAS, as the general population and workforce get older and live longer, U.S.

23 competitiveness will depend on how we support and prepare people at every stage of life and 24 career, employers, and our society more broadly for this demographic shift,⁴ and

25 WHEREAS, intergenerational concerns will likely grow, such as growing demands on family 26 caregivers, and the number of working adults as compared to retired older Americans, and

27 WHEREAS, the number of older Americans remaining in the workforce is also likely to grow as 28 these trends actualize, and workforce changes may be needed as a result, and

29 WHEREAS, workers age 55 or older have been the fastest-growing age group in the labor 30 force for more than two decades, and made up 24% of the U.S. workforce in 2022,⁵ and 31 projections indicate that older workers will fill 150 million more jobs globally by 2030,⁶ with 32 projections

33 WHEREAS, to meet these changes, the “world of aging” policies, programs, and organizations 34 may need to be inventoried, assessed, researched, and/or modernized, including access to and 35 implementation and adopted use of technology, to create an effective and efficient 21st 36 Century system of networks to improve services, resources and opportunities for current and 37 future older adults, address overall societal impacts, and to prepare for unmet needs.

38 NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that NLGA will work to assist officials and the public 39 to be aware of these demographic realities for policy considerations from housing, health, 40 technology, workforce, recreation, and more.

41 BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that NLGA will join in recognition of Older Americans month
42 each May.

43 BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that NLGA will join in recognition of Healthy Aging Month each 44 September.

45 BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that NLGA recognizes the importance of collaboration among 46 Federal, State, Tribal, local and community officials, private, and not-for-profit entities and 47 individuals in preparation for and response to these changing societal demographics.
